AMERICA OWES VICTIMS OF GUN VIOLENCE A VOTE ON GUN PROPOSALS, OBAMA SAYS

Chicago Tribune

As Hadiya Pendleton's parents sat next to the first lady and listened, President Obama told the nation Tuesday that his gun proposals deserve a vote in Congress because of victims like the slain Chicago teen.

Delivering his State of the Union address, Obama said that in the two months since the school shootings in Newtown, Conn., "more than 1,000 birthdays, graduations and anniversaries have been stolen from our lives by a bullet from a gun."

"One of those we lost was a young girl named Hadiya Pendleton," the president said. "She was 15 years old. She loved Fig Newtons and lip gloss. She was a majorette. She was so good to her friends, they all thought they were her best friend."

"Just three weeks ago, she was here, in Washington, with her classmates, performing for her country at my inauguration," he said. "A week later, she was shot and killed in a Chicago park after school, just a mile away from my house."

Hadiya's parents, Nathaniel Pendleton and Cleopatra Cowley-Pendleton, guests of first lady Michelle Obama, stood and applauded as the president demanded that Congress consider his gun measures, saying that the parents of Hadiya and other shooting victims "deserve a vote."

More than 30 gun violence survivors and loved ones were seated in the chamber during the speech. Many of them were part of a group that traveled to Washington this week to lobby for the president's gun proposals. Several were from Chicago and other parts of Illinois.

Gun rights advocates have said the president's gun agenda would unfairly affect law-abiding gun owners and that any government crackdown should target criminals who are violating existing laws.

At a hearing on gun violence a few hours before Obama's speech, Sen. Dick Durbin (D-Ill.) asked those in the audience who had been affected by gun violence to stand.

Dozens of people, about half of the crowd, rose in silence.

"Look about this room," Durbin said. "Understand that the debate we have before us has affected so many lives."

During the State of the Union speech, Obama made a series of proposals on the economy, energy and education. Here are some of his key initiatives:

- Raise the minimum wage to $9 per hour, up from the current level of $7.25 per hour, by the end of 2015. Ensure that minimum wage keeps pace with inflation.
- Invest $50 billion in infrastructure, including $40 billion for urgent fixes for deficient bridges.
- Urge Congress to lower the corporate tax rate. Establish a special rate for manufacturers that is even lower.
- Start an "Energy Security Trust" with funding from oil and gas drilling royalties and use the money for research on electric vehicles, natural gas vehicles and biofuels.
- Work with Congress and support U.S. states to provide universal access to preschool for 4-year-olds. REUTERS CONTRIBUTED

NEXT STOP: CHICAGO

President Obama plans to talk about helping struggling families make their way into the middle class during a trip to the Chicago area Friday, when he also will touch on the wide-ranging approach he thinks the country should take to fighting gun violence. The president's remarks will be devoted to the "ladders of opportunity" he thinks will help working families, like raising the federal minimum wage and investing in education, a senior administration official said Tuesday. Grammy Awards: An insider's view

Nikki Lynette

@nikkilynette

As most people who watched the Grammys already know, Sunday's ceremony in L.A. was awesome. Moments such as Justin Timberlake's return to the stage, the star-studded Bob Marley tribute and Fun.'s indoor rainstorm made the night unforgettable.

This is my first year as a member of the Chicago chapter of The Recording Academy (that's the fancy name for the organization that votes on the Grammys), and now that I've been involved with the process I appreciate it so much more as a musician and as a music lover.

First of all, a lot of people don't understand how Grammys are awarded. It is a peer award, which means that only music-making folks who are working in the industry are allowed to vote. It's a two-part system, and all of the music that is up for nomination is made available to voting members so we can make informed decisions. So if your favorite artist didn't win a Grammy this year, it doesn't mean your fave is being given the cold shoulder by horrible meanies who have bad taste in music or whatever. It just means they didn't win the majority vote this year. There's always next year.

Another thing most people don't know is there is a whole ceremony that takes place before the Grammy Awards airs on TV. This ceremony is held for "pre-telecast categories," which I think means "less mainstream" categories. I was shocked to see that the major hip-hop and electronic music awards did not make it to the live telecast of the Grammys—they were announced at the pre-telecast event. I'm really glad I went to this ceremony, mainly because Skrillex's reaction to winning two Grammys back to back was priceless.

Another interesting tidbit: The Grammys stage was the coolest thing ever in life. (Yes, this is an undeniable fact.) The stage was made of a giant catwalk that connects two separate platforms. Between sets and during commercial breaks, a backstage crew moved practically at the speed of light on these platforms to get props set up and equipment plugged in and all that other good stuff to transform these platforms into two separate stages. They were setting up Bruno Mars' colorful, throwback-style stage and Jack White's monochrome, rocked-out stage at the same time! It all looks seamless on TV, but that's because there are people busting their asses behind the scenes to make it look simple. Kudos to them!

Of course there were details from the live telecast that nobody at home could have seen. Like the moment at the beginning of the show when Justin Timberlake grabbed the mic and asked everyone to take their seats. Or when hardly anybody clapped when Chris Brown's name was announced as a nominee for best urban contemporary album. Or the fact that confetti from Taylor Swift's opening performance floated around the Staples Center through the entire ceremony.

As a person who is chronically unimpressed by most things in life, I have to admit: Sitting in the audience and witnessing this was pretty badass.

Attending the Grammys for the first time was a great experience, made even more awesome by the fact that Chicago was so well represented. From classical group Eighth Blackbird to hip-hop producers Da Internaz, Chicago's presence definitely was felt. I was honored to be a part of it. And of course, I'm now inspired to bring home a Grammy of my own some day.

A girl can dream, right?

TIME TO UP YOUR FOURSQUARE ROMANCE GAME, EH?

Let the Valentine's Day scramble begin.

Foursquare recently rounded up some data on locations in U.S. cities from more than 3 billion check-ins to see which cities are the most (and least) romantic and which restaurants are most visited on Valentine's Day. Among the winners: French restaurants, cupcake shops, wineries, steakhouses, Italian restaurants and seafood restaurants.

Since Chicago wasn't listed as one of the most or least romantic cities, we can rest easy knowing we're somewhere in the middle. So we have that going for us.

Fun fact: Foursquare also found that flower shops were the most popular spots for last-minute Valentine's Day shopping, specifically at 3 p.m. the day of Great Job! Way to go, society!

Family and friends of one of the E2 nightclub fire victims commemorate the tragedy at the former site of the club in 2008. TRIBUNE FILE

After the ashes

10 years after tragic nightclub fire, safety review finds progress

Chicago Tribune

In the aftermath of the E2 nightclub disaster that killed 21 people in 2003, the city of Chicago vowed to step up weekend inspections of clubs.

Ten years later, city data released to the Tribune, as well as interviews with club owners and others, indicate that the promise was kept and that clubs are doing a better job of staying within the city code. Friction between club owners and the city also has decreased.

But the Tribune also found that the number of inspections has dropped in recent years, and that despite the city's heightened commitment to nightclub safety, a two-decade-old city ordinance requiring venues to do in-house inspections of their exitways is not being enforced.

The ordinance says every venue that can accommodate at least 300 people must appoint an employee "safety warden" who surveys the establishment weekly for problems that include "obstruction of stairwells, corridors and exits." The warden must keep a ledger that the fire and buildings departments can view at any time, and must file forms with the fire department three times a year affirming that the weekly reviews take place. The city does not enforce the ordinance, and it's not clear whether it ever has, according to a buildings department spokesman.

Those killed at the E2 nightclub on Feb. 17, 2003, were fleeing pepper spray released during a fight, but the incident had something in common with fatal crowd crushes at concerts and sports events around the world, and even the nightclub fire last month in Brazil: a frenzied crowd trapped in a small space with few ways out.

Problems that contribute to those scenarios—blocked stairways, locked exits doors and missing occupancy placards and exit signs—are spotted by fire department inspectors far less these days than they were in 2003, according to the city data.

Over the past decade, weekend inspectors from the city's Fire Prevention Bureau have visited hundreds of nightclubs, music festivals and taverns per year. Thirty-two inspections between 2003 and 2012 resulted in venues being shut down for the night because of overcrowding, the data show. Other problems lead to warnings or citations; some were corrected on the spot by operators.

Problem findings sharply dropped soon after the inspection program began. In 2003, the program's first year, roughly half of inspector visits found a new or uncorrected problem. But one year later, in 2004, inspectors were finding problems in about a quarter of their visits, and in the ensuing years, that proportion dropped below 10 percent, a Tribune analysis of the data found.

Many clubs that got several warnings in the early years of the program have had no problems since.

George may play role in pope pick

Chicago Tribune

As he nears his own retirement, Cardinal Francis George will head to Rome and likely will play a powerful role in choosing Pope Benedict XVI's successor and charting a course for the next chapter of the Roman Catholic Church.

Most recently focused on reaching a new generation and preserving Catholic identity in an increasingly secularized world, George, the College of Cardinals' elder statesman, is expected to encourage his colleagues to choose a pontiff who will do the same.

"Cardinal George is a highly respected member of the College of Cardinals and his views on the church's situation and the next pope will be carefully considered by his brother cardinals," said conservative Catholic scholar George Weigel, who recently wrote a book titled "Evangelical Catholicism."

Cardinal George's colleagues turn to him not just because he's the leader in Chicago, where parishioners are as diverse as the global church is. He's also traveled widely in Africa and Latin America as the vicar general of the Missionary Oblates of Mary Immaculate and lived and worked in Rome. In the U.S., he has served as president of the national bishops conference and led the charge for a zero-tolerance policy on clergy sexual abuse.

THE WEIGHT LOSS PROGRAM THAT FLAT OUT WORKS!!

MAKE 2013 THE YEAR THAT YOU FINALLY LOSE THE WEIGHT!

The numbers of people who lost weight and changed their lives on our program last year were staggering. But don't listen to me. Listen to them:

A brand new weight loss patient told me when I met her that no weight loss program has ever been able to make her lose even one pound. Well, listen to what she has to say about us:

"I've lost seventeen pounds in three weeks and I've never been able to lose weight before. This really works!"

A 57 year old man suffering from type II Diabetes and several other health problems has totally turned his life around after losing more than seventy pounds, twenty-nine inches off his waist and lowering his insulin from 100 units per day to only 15 units per day and then finally to zero.

"It used to take me a half hour to put on my shoes and socks and now it only takes a few minutes...I didn't used to be able to work out but now I'm able to do it whenever I want. I've been completely off my insulin for over a month!"

IF YOU ARE SERIOUS ABOUT LOSING WEIGHT AND CHANGING YOUR LIFE IN 2013, DO NOT MISS THIS FREE ONE-HOUR SEMINAR!!

Listen to what some of my other patients have to say:

"You've done for me what no other doctor could do. I've lost 47 pounds and I feel wonderful. This is very easy to do. I'll keep this up for the rest of my life."

"It's really hard to believe that 20 pounds can make a difference. Yes it can!... I dropped 20 pounds, 3 pant sizes and lowered my cholesterol from 298 to 205. Happy? Yes!"

"I was tired of being overweight. My clothes had become tighter and tighter and my C.O.P.D. was very bothersome. I've now lost 39 pounds. Having lost the weight I am breathing much easier and not needing to use my oxygen as frequently. I am very happy with this program."

"When I started I was a size 12 and now I'm a size 4!"

"I lost 22 pounds in the first three weeks alone!"

"I lost several inches off my waistline without even trying."

You may have seen my ads with the headline that reads "I CAN MAKE ANYONE LOSE WEIGHT." Well, after what we saw happen in our clinic last year, I definitely stand behind that. 2012 was an incredible year of weight loss for so many of my patients!

Not only can I make you lose weight, I can show you how to keep it off forever! In my years of practice I have found that helping people lose weight and keep it off is the one single thing that has the potential to create the most numerous changes in overall health problems.

If you are like most people, you have probably lost weight in the past only to gain it back and then some. The old yo-yo dieting syndrome. There is a reason for that and I'll show you what it is. There is no gimmick or quick fix that will ever make you lose weight permanently. This is the REAL THING!

I know there is a good chance you are dealing with Type II Diabetes, High Blood Pressure, High Cholesterol, Hypothyroidism, joint pain and possibly a number of other health conditions. Come spend one hour with me and I'll show you how you may be able to completely rid yourself of Type II Diabetes, and possibly throw away your blood pressure and cholesterol drugs forever. Whether you want to lose that last 10 pounds or you NEED to lose 100 lbs or more, I can show you how to do it.

If you are dealing with a weight problem I sincerely want to help you get your life back. Are you frustrated with trying so many gimmicks and still dealing with weight issues? Are you sick of the hype and false hope? Have you given up on losing weight? If you are serious about losing your weight once and for all, then call to reserve your seat right now. This one hour seminar could be the beginning of a new life for you. Don't miss it!

Cabin burns as Calif. fugitive, police face off

Dorner

Reuters

LOS ANGELES No body has yet been recovered from a burned-out cabin in the mountains above L.A. following a gun fight between police and a suspect believed to be a fugitive ex-cop, despite news reports to the contrary, a Los Angeles Police spokesman said late Tuesday.

Los Angeles Police Commander Andrew Smith said the cabin in the Big Bear area northeast of L.A. was "still too hot" for police to enter.

Several news organizations had reported that a body was found in the cabin and had been identified as likely that of 33-year-old former Los Angeles police officer Christopher Dorner.

California authorities launched a six-day manhunt for Dorner and police believed they had cornered him in the mountain cabin.

TV news footage showed smoke and flames engulfing the cabin in a heavily wooded area of the snow-covered mountains of the San Bernardino National Forest.

San Bernardino County sheriff's spokeswoman Cindy Bachman said a "smoke bomb" had been set off at the cabin before the fire started, but she was uncertain if it had been detonated by the gunman or law enforcement authorities.

Police said the man they believe to be Dorner surfaced for the first time in several days after breaking into a home near the ski resort community of Big Bear Lake, tying up a couple there and stealing their pickup truck.

A state game warden apparently on the lookout for Dorner exchanged gunshots with the driver of the stolen truck. The vehicle later was abandoned and the driver fled into the forest.

Officials of the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department said the gunman barricaded himself inside another cabin and engaged in a shootout with police as they closed in on him.

One sheriff's deputy was shot and killed and another was wounded, Sheriff John McMahon told reporters.

Brandon Bollig’s available to beat your butt in a pickup game—for a price

Ben Johnson

Before forwarding the link, my brother asked if I had any interest in killing about an hour of my time. I said sure, why not. And now my life is different.

The link he sent me was to thuzio.com, a booking agency for former (and some current) athletes offering a range of personal appearance services. Live in the San Diego area and want former Seattle second baseman Bret Boone to show up to your fantasy baseball draft? That’ll be $1,000. It might seem like a steep price to pay, but it’ll be worth it to see the look on your friends’ faces as they struggle to comprehend why Bret Boone is there. “Why is Bret Boone here?” they will say. Priceless.

Blackhawks enforcer Brandon Bollig is available to beat the crap out of your friends in a pickup game for only $500.

Jay Williams is available, too. Take him for a motorcycle ride. It’s not on the menu, but if he’ll play golf with a stranger for $2,500, I’m sure a motorcycle ride is negotiable if you have enough cash.

Or if that’s a little out of your price range, you could pay $99 for a phone call with former Cubs second baseman Mickey Morandini. You could probably track down his phone number on the Internet for less than that, but for $99 you have reasonable assurance he won’t hang up on you if you ask him if mullets and body odor were mandatory on the 1991 Phillies. The point is: He’s available.

Former NFL kicker Morten Andersen is available for “Custom Requests” in the Atlanta area, so if you really want to dig deep you could probably pay him to kick your boss in the gonads.

Of course there’s a depressing undercurrent here. There are a lot of people who spent their whole lives trying to be good at something, and then got too old for it, and now to supplement their income they have agreed to sell themselves to any random bored rich guy who comes along.

But there are also a lot of people who did that and don’t get paid $5,000 to eat dinner. So as far as I’m concerned, bring on the Mickey Morandini prank calls.

1 More in-conference Big Ten football games means more questionable conference calls. Legends? Leaders?	... more opportunities for road trips and reckless behavior! Bang bang!	... more things for me to ignore until college basketball season starts.	... more geographic rivalries. In MLB, look how well it works for the Sox and Royals!	In the name of Pope Ray Lewis, please no!
2 What's the best part about seven straight Blackhawks home games?	Chicago stands United. There's no place like dome.	They might not lose until June now!	I can make it through at least the beginning of the third period before I fall asleep.	Well if going 17-0-2 isn't hot enough, it also means seven nights of Ice Girls.	Seven straight mornings of "flu-like symptoms" at work for most Chicagoans.
3 What should Mike Tyson add to the Chicago stop of his one-man show?	A knockout. Give the audience something nice to look at.	A visit to the RedEye offices? Come on, Iron Mike!	The missing piece of Evander Holyfield's ear.	Not sure, but I'm told he's all ears and champing at the bit for ideas.	A customer-friendly refund policy.
4 Why are the Celtics thriving without Rajon Rondo?	He's from Loseville.	Because they took notes from the Bulls playbook. Rondo vs. Rose in the play-offs again, baby!	They no longer have to deal with the reflection of Rondo's enormous fivehead.	In my New Orleans Mardi Gras voice: "The team is just better Rondo cha think?"	No clue. I was watching TNT and listening to Shaq try to explain it but I couldn't understand a word he said.
5 Who said this: "I'm going to make people want me"?	A Cubs player up to his Cheap Tricks again.	Me in second grade. It was a weird time in my life, trust me.	I'm torn between guessing Malt Garza and guessing Cheap Trick.	Taylor Swift in her follow-up to the hit "We Are Never Ever Getting Back Together."	Matt Garza. I Googled it and found out in less than a second. You guys should hire better researchers.

ROSE 'FAR AWAY' FROM RETURN

Derrick Rose
GETTY IMAGES

RedEye

Speaking extensively for the first time since the basketball season began, Derrick Rose told USA Today on Monday: "I don't have a set date [to return]. I'm not coming back until I'm 110 percent. Who knows when that can be? It can be within a couple of weeks. It could be next year. It could be any day. It could be any time. It's just that I'm not coming back until I'm ready."

"Right now, probably in the high 80s. Far away. Far away."

For his part, Bulls coach Tom Thibodeau said Tuesday: "Nothing has changed. He's right where he should be, right on schedule."

There has to be good news in there somewhere, right? Like maybe the fact that Rose is capable of giving 110 percent.

THE MOUTHWATCH
“No, never, that’s ludicrous. Never at all. Never in my life.”

—Fred Hoiberg, to deadspin.com, on whether he smoked pot while playing for the Bulls in 2002-03. Former Bull Jay Williams said in a recent New York Times story that his teammates smoked marijuana before games.

NOT-SO-HOT DATE

The International Olympic Committee on Tuesday dropped wrestling from its list of “core” sports. It will be part of the 2016 Games but not in 2020.

Municipal Bar and Dining Co.; @darling_gina

After working for two years at Spybar, Rogers Park resident Gina, 24, joined the crew at gastropub Municipal in River North. A sporty crowd during games plus a clubby vibe on the weekends keeps her on her toes, as does her coursework in nursing school. Catch her: Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights at Municipal (216 W. Ohio St.)

Signature drink: Fans of fruit punch will appreciate the sweet-tart Soleil cocktail ($11), made with amaretto, rum, vodka, sour mix, fruit juices and grenadine.

This winter's notorious flu virus wouldn't cooperate with our editorial schedule—despite our pleas—and singled out Gina the morning of our photo shoot. Luckily, she recovered quickly and is back behind the bar.*

VINCENT CLUKE

Untitled; @moonle_mcrastee

A childhood love of the TV show "Cheers" inspired Vincent's 15-year bartending career. Now 36, this Near West Side resident enjoys creating inventive cocktails for the new guests he meets at the 7-month-old River North speakeasy-style lounge, which houses a whiskey library as well as live music. Catch him: Wednesdays through Saturdays at Untitled (111 W. Kinzie St.)

Signature drink: The Moonbeam ($12) is a light, herbal nighttime sipper made with gin, mezcal, passion fruit juice, thyme, kumquats and simple syrup.

BRIAR BRACKNEY

Vincent; @briarbrackney

Albany Park resident Briar, 28, has been in the service industry since her first hosting gig at 16. She has been manning the bar at this small, Euro-leaning restaurant in Andersonville since it opened in 2010. Catch her: Tuesday through Saturday nights at Vincent (1475 W. Balmoral Ave.)

Signature drink: La Dolce Vita ($11) isn't all sweetness: gin and a tangy-sweet and sour syrup are tempered by Campari and bitters.

SARAH VONDERHAAR

Old Town Social; @sarahvonderhaar

Talkative and outgoing, Sarah, 26, has been bartending for four years while also playing music, modeling and attending graphic design school. The Roscoe Village resident joined Old Town Social in June after two years at Rockit, and also bartends once a week at Lincoln Park beer hall Prost. Catch her: Tuesday, Friday and Saturday nights at Old Town Social (455 W. North Ave.)

Signature drink: Yep, the Ginger Blonde ($12)—rye whiskey, honey liqueur, lemon juice, ginger beer, orange bitters and a lemon twist—matches Sarah's pixie cut.

DAN ANDRUSS

312 Chicago

Since becoming head bartender at 312 Chicago, Dan, 26, has begun experimenting with barrel-aged cocktails to round out the menu of classics at this Loop bar and restaurant. Dan, who lives in Andersonville, is a descendant of Johnny Appleseed, who famously brought apples—and hard cider—to parts of the Midwest. Catch him: Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons and Thursday through Saturday evenings at 312 Chicago (136 N. LaSalle St.)

Signature drink: A nod to Dan's ancestor, The Chapman ($12)—Johnny Appleseed's real last name—combines apple brandy, lemon juice, honeycrisp apple-clove syrup and plum bitters.

MEG SILVAS

The Orbit Room and Kuma's Corner; @megcense

Growing up in a family that owned bars and restaurants in Joliet, Meg, 26, learned the ins and outs of the industry at a young age. Now, the Avondale dweller works at two bars in her own neighborhood, splitting her time between mixing drinks for her regulars at The Orbit Room and pouring beers and shots at metal, burger and beer mecca Kuma's Corner. Catch her: Monday and Tuesday nights at The Orbit Room (2959 N. California Ave.) and Thursday, Saturday and Sunday nights at Kuma's Corner (2900 W. Belmont Ave.)

Signature drink: The Gem ($9)—her name spelled backward—is a twist on a refreshing classic made with gin, lemon and lime juice, sour mix, soda and cucumber.

KENNETH ZAWACKI

Maria's Packaged Goods & Community Bar; @vdken

Kenneth, 32, lives in Bridgeport and is as passionate about bartending as he is about his hood. At Maria's, a longtime tavern that was renamed and spiffed up by the owner's sons two and a half years ago, he gives both craft beers and accessible craft cocktails equal attention—and he's been known to DJ as well. Catch him: Wednesday, Friday and Saturday nights at Maria's (960 W. 31st St.)

Signature drink: The 11th Ward Old Fashioned ($9) riffs on a classic with bourbon, cherries, bitters, demerara sugar and water.

CHASE STACKER

O'Malley's West; @stacksonstacks

A former DePaul student himself Chase, 25, revels in the energetic college crowds that O'Malley's draws on Thursday nights. Not the kind of bartender to don a vest and loafers, this East Lakeview resident prefers to preside over a bar where he can show his personality—which, he admits, is a bit loud.

Catch him: Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday nights, plus occasional Fridays, Sundays and Mondays at O'Malley's West (2249 N. Lincoln Ave.)

Signature drink: He usually lets his customers name it, but no matter what it's called, The Chaser ($6) is a mix of blueberry vodka, peach schnapps, lemonade, cranberry juice and lemon-lime soda.

DJ Lady Starlight and Lady Gaga

The lady behind Gaga

Lady Starlight steps into her future

By Andy Downing | FOR REDEYE

Sometimes it really does pay to have friends in high places.

For more than seven years, musician/artist Lady Starlight, born Colleen Martin, has been a close confidant of pop icon Lady Gaga. In the early days, she served as an artistic collaborator and occasional muse, helping Gaga dream up some of her more elaborate costumes. On Gaga's current tour, Starlight, 37, serves as a supporting act, warming up the audience with a high-concept set she described as "performance art." Though Gaga was forced to postpone the tour's Wednesday and Thursday shows at the United Center due to an injury, Starlight will be in town to perform at Berlin.

Starlight's close relationship with Gaga—the two share travel accommodations on the road and chat on a daily basis—has given her a unique perspective on the pop star's ascent. In a recent phone interview, Starlight opened up about appearing with Gaga at Lollapalooza in 2007 and 2010, and the major difference between the two Ladies.

On moving from the Lollapalooza side stage in '07 to headliner in '10

We had a decent crowd [in 2007], but it got bigger and bigger as people said, "What is going on over there?" It's a lot of rock and guys [at Lollapalooza], and we were the opposite. It was like a big old [bleep] you. [2010] was the most incredible full circle moment. To walk out on that stage and see that crowd ... I will never forget that.

On Lady Gaga's ability to remain unchanged despite the intense media spotlight

LADY STARLIGHT

» DJ set Thursday at Berlin ($7). Doors at 10 p.m., featuring Big Dipper, Redux and BSTARR

It's very surprising how little effect it's had. Really, we were always preparing for this. This level is what we set out to achieve. She's naturally down-to-earth, and she always kept a perspective on the bigger picture. The fact that she still has me and all her old friends in her life shows you how little she has changed. We still do all the same things; it's just that now we're in really expensive hotels.

On the major difference between Lady Starlight and Lady Gaga

There's not much of one, actually. We just had a conversation today, and she could understand what I was going through because we think exactly the same. Her objective has always been bigger, though. She wants to get her message across to as many people [as] possible. I wish I had that, but for some reason I insist on doing the thing least likely to succeed. That's my mission, to destroy my career.

On helping conceive Gaga's earliest costumes

We always wanted things we couldn't afford. We wanted things to light up and fog to come out of garments. Basically everything she does now because she has a budget and an awesome creative team.

On constructing a meat dress of her own

I'm going to use tempeh. I'm going to be sensitive to animal rights. [Laughs].

Dead Space 3

Xbox 360, PlayStation 3, PC

In space, as the tagline for the movie "Alien" goes, no one can hear you scream. But in EA's "Dead Space 3," there's no time to be terrified by all the space mutants creeping around dark corridors when you're so busy shooting, collecting and crafting. The suspense and dread that marked the first of EA's sci-fi horror franchise have been replaced by an emphasis on trigger-happy action, puzzles and discovering ways to boost your arsenal of high-tech weaponry. "Dead Space 3" suffers at times from feelings of been-there, done-that after a third time facing the Necromorph menace, but the addition of a co-op partner to join frazzled Isaac Clarke and a plot that involves an unexpected love triangle make this a worthy ending to the trilogy.

THREE TO PLAY

BY RYAN SMITH | FOR REDEYE

Temple Run 2

iOS, Android

If you own a smartphone, there's a decent chance you've at least tried "Temple Run," an indie game-turned-phenomenon that's been downloaded by more than 170 million people since the end of 2011. The appeal is simple—it's like an endless chase scene from an Indiana Jones movie where you guide a constantly running adventurer down a perilous path past obstacles with a few well-timed swipes on your touchscreen. The sequel features higher-quality graphics, sections where you race through tunnels in a runaway minecart and a "continue" system you can pay for with real cash. Hardcore fans of the original likely will be pleased, but the lack of real innovation makes "Temple Run 2" feel like it's, well, running in place.

Tennis In The Face

iOS

His pro tennis career derailed by an addictive energy drink called Explodz that forces him into rehab, Pete Pagassi wants revenge against the company. That's the concept behind "Tennis in the Face," a wacky physics-based puzzler that borrows mechanics from "Angry Birds." But instead of shooting down space pigs, you're trying to knock out creepy clowns, riot police and even Explodz-addicted hipsters with a tennis ball sent flying from an overhand smash from Pete. The first few levels are easy enough, but in later stages, it can be very difficult to set off a chain reaction that will hit every enemy on the screen.

AGAINST THE ROPES

Mike Tyson

MIKE TYSON TAKES ON HIS MOST CONTROVERSIAL OPPONENT—HIMSELF

By Julia Borcherts

FOR REDEYE

Mike Tyson is a man who's lived his life in the headlines. And along with those that made him a celebrity—the youngest heavyweight champion of the world, at age 20—came headlines documenting a darker side—the failed marriage to actress Robin Givens, a rape conviction and Evander Holyfield's right ear.

He has since become a vegan, struggled with the death of a young daughter and worked as an actor in two "Hangover" movies, as the host of Animal Planet's "Taking on Tyson" and as an inmate and rape victim on a hotly debated "Law and Order: SVU" episode.

Now, Iron Mike takes the stage to discuss his controversial life in "Mike Tyson: Undisputed Truth," a solo show written by his wife, Kiki Tyson, and directed by filmmaker Spike Lee, which hits Chicago as the second stop on a national tour. We caught up with him to find out more.

What can Chicago audiences expect?

They can expect to see a riveting show. I'm on stage for 90 minutes giving the audience my all. I will take them on an emotional roller coaster ride into the crazy world I call my life.

How did the project come to be?

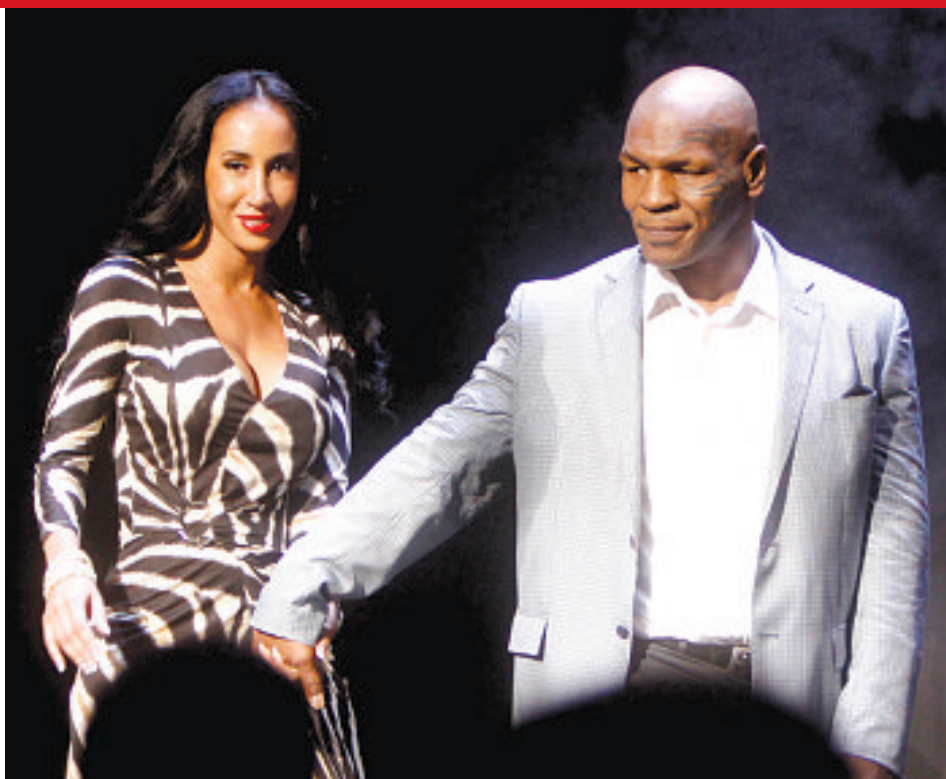

My wife and I were inspired after watching Chazz Palminteri's one-man show, "A Bronx Tale." We left inspired and I love entertaining people and wanted to challenge myself. I told my wife I wanted to try doing my own show about my life. My wife immediately started drafting something. Then, a few weeks later we had a random encounter with a producer, Adam Steck [of] SPI Entertainment. He wanted to produce a one-man show about my life. It was like the stars were aligned, because we had already started working on a show concept.

How did Spike Lee become involved?

We did our show in Las Vegas for a two-week run. The following day, I had to leave the country on business and Spike Lee called me. Spike said that he and Jimmy Nederlander wanted to take our show to Broadway. We did a two-week run last summer on Broadway and now we are taking the show on a national tour.

Where are you at in your life that influenced your to approach the show?

I am in a really peaceful place. I am very happy and grateful to have an amazing support team of family and friends. I am comfortable with the man that I am today. This translates into my show and my desire to tell my story. It's about triumphing over your inner demons and thanking God for helping you through.

What surprised you most about your wife's script?

We are a team and developing the script was a cohesive undertaking. She was very respectful during this process, so nothing surprised me. However, initially, she drafted a more sugar-coated perspective of my life. I realize she was trying to protect me, but I had to remind her that I'm telling my undisputed truth. It's not always nice, but it is the truth. She understood and redrafted the content to fit more in format with my gritty life.

How does walking on stage compare to walking into the ring?

They are actually similar. Both are performances—just different styles of entertainment. But walking on the stage is more unnerving. When it's just you onstage, you have no one to blame but yourself for a flawed performance, so the stakes are higher. I have nerves until I hit the stage—but then the love from the audience relaxes me. I really love performing.

Do you worry about hecklers?

I'm a big boy. The question is, can hecklers handle me? Just kidding. I'm heckled sometimes. It comes with the territory, I suppose. I'm OK with it. It makes the night unique.

Mike Tyson: Undisputed Truth

Go: 7:30 p.m. Friday; 8 p.m. Saturday at the Cadillac Palace Theatre, 151 W. Randolph St.

Tickets: $50-$95; 800-775-2000; broadwayinchicago.com

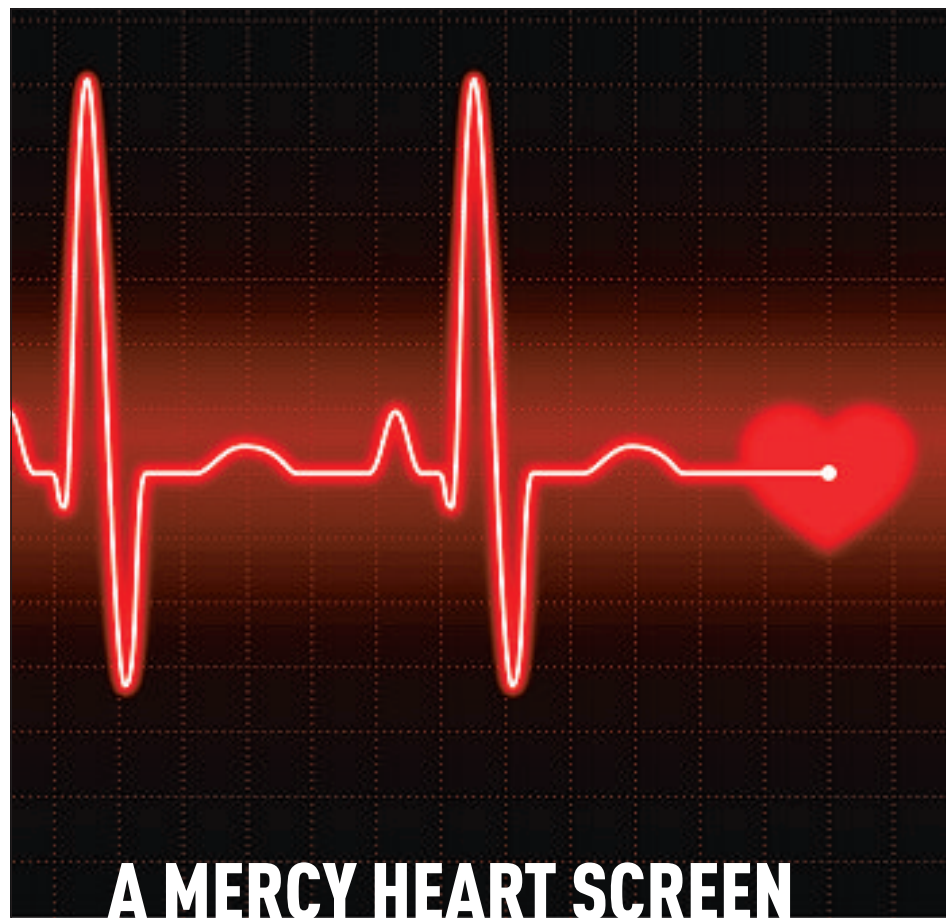

What's the most unexpected thing that's happened at a performance?

I suppose the most unexpected thing is when I start really enjoying my storytelling and start to ad lib funny anecdotes. I surprise myself sometimes at the stuff I say. People come up to me and say, "I had no idea you were so funny."

You've now acted in movies, on TV and on stage. Which do you prefer?

I can't pick one over the other, really. They all have their unique qualities. But I always like to challenge myself and theater to me is the most challenging because there aren't any second takes.

'Spartacus' warrior comes out swingin'

SHOW PATROL

Curt Wagner

■ cwagner@tribune.com
■ @showpatrol

When Cynthia Addai-Robinson took over the role of the slave Naevia on "Spartacus: Vengeance," she wasn't sure how viewers would respond. A year later, she's kicking some serious butt on "Spartacus: War of the Damned," and fans are loving her.

"I remember [creator Steven S. DeKnight] giving me just a vague idea that I would be eventually fighting and kicking ass," the London-born actress said in a recent call with reporters. "But I don't think I could have really imagined what I ultimately ended up doing, which was some of the hardest work I've ever done, really."

So far this season, Naevia has led the ambush of a Roman patrol and fought bravely in open-field battles. Yet despite her fighting prowess, Naevia continues to struggle with the mental abuse and violent assaults she suffered from both Roman soldiers and other slaves after being banished from the House of Batiatus and sent to the salt mines last season.

Just as Naevia has proved herself a warrior worthy of standing with Crixus, Spartacus and the other former gladiators, Addai-Robinson has impressed her co-stars and her boss.

"I think the audience is going to be absolutely blown away by Naevia this season," DeKnight said during the same call. "Every time we were watching dailies in the writer's room, every time Cynthia would come on screen, we'd spend the next 10 minutes talking about how cool you were."

The physicality of the role didn't come easily for Addai-Robinson, who had no experience with fighting or doing her own stunts before "Spartacus." But she trained with all the other actors in their gladiator boot camp before filming of both seasons began, and credits the production's stunt department with helping all the actors.

"I definitely was pushed to the limits in a good way," she said. "There were many times and many days where I just thought, 'Oh my gosh, I don't know if I can do this. I'm really out of my depth here.' But I'm really happy with it and ... I have to say, some of the sequences this season are just absolutely amazing."

"Spartacus: War of the Damned" airs new episodes at 8 p.m. Fridays on Starz.

Step away from the Netflix

Binge-viewing changed the TV experience

Los Angeles Times

When Thomas Toth contracted pneumonia, he became inseparable from the cool, stylish Don Draper.

Toth watched all five seasons of the AMC series “Mad Men” from his sickbed in a two-week viewing binge. He became so captivated that he began sporting skinny ties and drinking Old Fashioned cocktails.

“The nuances of the storylines are getting so complicated—they’re introducing characters in Episode 2 and that character comes back in Episode 6—I can digest things a lot quicker and easier when I binge on them,” the Denver resident said.

Toth has lots of company. Services such as Netflix and Hulu, as well as DVRs, have transformed the TV viewing experience by enabling viewers to devour multiple episodes or even entire seasons of “The Wire” or “Downton Abbey” in marathon viewing sessions.

Now Netflix is making a massive bet that it can satisfy the addiction that it helped create.

At 12:01 a.m. Feb. 1, the service debuted its first original series, a political drama called “House of Cards” that stars Kevin Spacey as a ruthless, scheming House majority whip.

In a departure from television tradition, the entire season of “House of Cards”—all 13 episodes, nearly 13 hours of tense Capitol Hill drama—are available at once, with the click of a button.

Millions of Americans are binge-viewing serialized dramas and comedies, including those that no longer can be found on the network prime-time schedule. The phenomenon is so pervasive that a majority of Americans ages 8 to 66 say they’ve engaged in this sort of copious TV consumption, according to a study conducted by media consultant Frank N. Magid Associates Inc.

This instant-gratification approach flouts network scheduling traditions.

Hollywood has always fed audiences a diet of, “Wait a week and we’ll give you new episodes, then wait a season, we’ll give you another season,” Netflix Chief Content Office Ted Sarandos said.

“The Internet is attuning people to get what they want when they want it,” Sarandos said. “‘House of Cards’ is literally the first show for the on-demand generation.”

Kevin Spacey and Robin Wright on 'House of Cards'

The absence of ads means that each episode has more time for storylines and relationships—as much as 15 more minutes of story per television hour.

“We’ve been impacting how people watch and when they watch,” Sarandos said. “But ‘House of Cards’ is the first thing on Netflix that’s ever been actually crafted to be watched in multiple episodes. So there’s no catch-up. There’s no exposition. There’s no ‘previously on’ or ‘next on.’”

BIG-SCREEN BLIND SPOT

'GROUNDHOG DAY'

Once in a while, a movie slips under your radar. For about, oh, 20 years. In "big-screen blind spot," we sit down with those "classic" movies everybody but us has seen and give them the nostalgia critic treatment.

By Ernest Wilkins | REDEYE
Confession: Until this week, I had never seen "Groundhog Day," the 1993 Bill Murray film that has become so beloved and influential that it's been placed in the Library of Congress's National Film Registry. You know, alongside "Citizen Kane" and "The Godfather."

Had I seen it in 1993 at the age of 8: I wouldn't have been interested. The film's humor comes from Murray's Heisman-like ability to express himself nonverbally, and the message of a self-centered weatherman having to relive the same day over and over again until he stops being such a selfish person and changes his tune. Also, at that age, if it wasn't the Green Ranger, Ricky Steamboat or something in the process of exploding, I wouldn't have cared.

Now: I love it. Quite frankly, I'm upset it took me this long to see this movie. It is hilarious. From the Ned Ryerson character to Murray's Phil adapting his repeated days to learn French and the piano, the movie literally makes something out of nothing with every minute. Phil's frequent attempts to kill himself notwithstanding, the film also is a pretty quality love story, if a little unorthodox. One thing though: Has anyone else thought about how to approach this situation? Not saying I would totally lose it, but I have a feeling the average person would go nuts before realizing that true love with Andie MacDowell is the solution to your problem.

Must be noted: If you're a fan of this movie, head to the online version of this story to lose your mind reading a list of interesting facts about the movie and original ideas for the script.

FACEOFF

LINDSAY LOHAN VS. HELENA BONHAM CARTER AS LIZ TAYLOR

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

There are certain things we thought couldn't get any kookier—and the Liz Taylor saga is one of them. After Lindsay Lohan ax-wounded her memory in Lifetime's "Liz and Dick" last year, we figured faux-Liz would be off somewhere licking her wounds. Oh, how wrong we were—the BBC has signed Helena Bonham Carter to play the superdiva in yet another made-for-TV movie, "Burton and Elizabeth," out later this year. Hold on to your throwing wine, kids, it's time for another RedEye faceoff to see which performance will rise to legendary status. DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA

LiLo: Grant Bowler, who you may know better as, um, Cooter on "True Blood," starred as Liz's long-suffering paramour.

CO-STAR

HBC: Dominic West, whom you may know better as hottie cop McNulty from "The Wire," is stepping into Burton's shoes.

WINNER: HBC. Imagining McNulty making out with Bellatrix Lestrange of "Harry Potter" fills us with unimaginable glee.

Has probably taken on the texture of Kentucky Fried Chicken. But did you see that amazing wig she wore as Old Liz?

HAIR

Currently houses an entire murder of crows and an insane asylum.

WINNER: HBC. When your hair actually takes on a life of its own, there's no turning back.

Housecats have better British accents than this.

ACCENT

She's all London-born and -bred, all the time. You probably couldn't suppress that accent with a toilet plunger.

WINNER: HBC. Ain't nothin' like the real thing.

See entire period of 2005-present.

PAST CRAZY-PANTS EXPERIENCE

She has two kids with longtime partner Tim Burton, and they live in separate houses on the same property. Rumor had it that there was a tunnel connecting them, but unfortunately that's apparently a giant lie.

WINNER: LILO. It's going to be a sad, sad day for the paparazzi when she goes out of business.

OVERALL WINNER

HBC. We don't even need to see this movie to know that it'll rise to new heights of ridiculousness—in a good way.

Talk about waiting to the last minute. Lady Gaga has postponed her United Center concerts scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday, Live Nation announced Tuesday evening. She got a doctor's note: Gaga has synovitis (severe inflammation of joints), according to the news release. No word yet on reschedule dates.

» The good news? Gaga's planned opening act, Lady Starlight, still is performing in Chicago. Meet her on Page 18.

Chicago, please

We're waiting! Justin Timberlake (left) and Jay-Z are plotting a summer stadium tour, rollingstone.com reported Tuesday, citing unnamed sources. JT has been teasing as much in recent days. "I don't know how much I should say," he said at the Grammys, according to the New York Post. "It's going to be a lot of fun, I know that."

HOT DATE

» That's when the G4 network will be rebranded as the Esquire Network aimed at modern, sophisticated men, latimes.com reports. The programming will include a cooking show called "Knife Fight."

» That's also the week Phoenix will release their new album, "Bankrupt!" the band announced Tuesday.

Attack of the Beliebers

Is there any wrath more terrifying than the revenge of Twitter tweens? Ask Patrick Carney, drummer for The Black Keys. After he told TMZ that Justin Bieber didn't deserve any Grammys, Bieber's army of teen fans mobilized to abuse Carney on Twitter with comments like "Talking [bleep] about Justin ? LMAO . leave ." and "HE NEEDS A PUNCH IN THE FACE WITH A BRICK." Carney's response? "My twitter today has turned into a virtual Claire's Accessories."

38

That's the average number of dead bodies appearing per episode of "The Walking Dead," according to funeral resource guide funeral-wise.com, making it the deadliest show on TV.
